

THEO 5304: New Testament Greek II 2016/17 2nd Term

Time Slot:	Monday	2:30 – 4:15 am	Lecture Room:	CKB 706C (Mon)
	Thursday	1:30 – 2:15 pm		YIA 201 (Thur)

I. COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course is a continuation of THEO 5303 NT Greek I. It provides students with an introduction to the essential elements to New Testament Greek. Students will master different aspects of Greek morphology and syntax and acquire a substantial reading vocabulary. In order to enhance learning, the course employs both deductive and inductive methods.

II. PREREQUISITE

Either completion of THEO 5303 New Testament Greek I or demonstration of equivalent proficiency in New Testament Greek.

III. LEARNING OUTCOMES

Knowledge Outcomes:

On the successful completion of this unit, students should be able to:

1. master the essential Greek morphology and syntax and a handful vocabulary of New Testament Greek; and
2. read and translate complex Greek sentences with the aid of lexicons.

Attitude Outcomes:

Throughout the learning process, students are expected to:

1. develop a regular revision practice;
2. develop a positive attitude to face difficulties in learning; and
3. develop an initiative to help others and seek help from others by means of group study.

V. COURSE STRUCTURE AND REQUIREMENTS

Structure:

The class meets every Monday for 2 class periods of lecture and Thursday for 1 class period of short test. The students will be introduced new topics of the Greek language during lecture.

Requirements:

1. Regular attendance of lectures is expected;
2. Weekly assignments should be completed (marks will be deducted for late assignments); and
3. Students should do revision daily; group revision is highly recommended.

VI. METHOD OF TEACHING AND LEARNING

The lectures will be based on the textbook. From the very beginning, students will attempt to memorise some common Greek vocabularies as well as translate Greek sentences into English. Handouts will be provided for the ease of understanding and memory. Relevant assignments and short tests will be given regularly in order to evaluate the progress of learning.
