

SPECIAL TOPICS I ON BIBLICAL STUDIES
ANCIENT NEAR EASTERN CULTURE AND THE HEBREW BIBLE
 2019–2020 Second Term Wed 7:00pm–9:30pm CKB UG05
 [Undergraduate Programs]

Course Code: THEO3213

Title in English: Special Topics I on Biblical Studies: Ancient Near Eastern Culture And The Hebrew Bible

Title in Chinese: 希伯來聖經選讀：古代近東文化與希伯來聖經

Course Description:

The course gives a historical overview of ancient Near East (in particular Southwest Asia) of the third millennium to 332 BCE – the larger socio-political and cultural context from which the literary production of the Hebrew Bible stemmed. The ancient world of West Asia and Egypt embodies the human heritage of primeval or early historical experiences inscribed on tablets in Sumerian, Akkadian, Egyptian languages. There are various literary forms, such as myths, prayers, ritual texts, legal writings and economic and administrative records whose parallels are found in the Hebrew Bible. The course also discusses about the comparative use of ancient Near Eastern texts and archaeological findings in Biblical Studies and examines the validity of various views on literary dependence of some biblical texts on the ancient Near Eastern ones. In order to appreciate the parallel religio-cultural traditions and concepts preserved in these literary ancient texts, this course will study a sample of relevant primary ancient texts and archaeological artifacts from this region with emphasis on its history, mythology, cosmology, as well as religious and political institutions. A particular focus will be given to the challenges and insights that Ancient Near Eastern Studies has brought to the presumed historicity of some biblical events, as well as their antiquity.

Learning Outcomes:

After completing this course, students should:

- Acquire an understanding of the literature, religion, and culture of ancient Near East in their historical and socio-political contexts.
- Heighten their sensitivity to the literary, religious and cultural dimensions of ancient Near Eastern civilizations and their effects on the literary production of the Hebrew Bible.
- Obtain a basic knowledge of the similarities and differences between selective ancient Near Eastern literary texts and their parallel biblical texts through comparative studies.
- Develop a critical and analytic attitude to approaches to and current debates/theories in reading biblical texts in light of ancient Near Eastern literature and culture.
- Be able to synthesize the knowledge acquired from course content, reading materials, and independent research and convey the synthesized knowledge through written assignments, as well as oral and visual presentations.
- Develop the skills to conduct independent research, especially in the interpretation of a biblical text in light of the archaeological data and literary texts of the ancient Near East.

Learning Activities:

The course consists mainly of lectures, interwoven with tutorial sessions, class discussion, independent reading, class presentation, and research activities. The average time allocation (per week) of the learning activities is as follows:

Academic Honesty and Plagiarism:

Attention is drawn to University policy and regulations on honesty in academic work, and to the disciplinary guidelines and procedures applicable to breaches of such policy and regulations. Details may be found at <http://www.cuhk.edu.hk/policy/academichonesty/>.

With each assignment, students will be required to submit a signed declaration that they are aware of these policies, regulations, guidelines and procedures. In the case of group projects, all students of the same group should be asked to sign the declaration, each of whom is responsible should there be any plagiarized contents in the group project, irrespective of whether he/she has signed the declaration and whether he/she has contributed directly or indirectly to the plagiarized contents.

For assignments in the form of a computer-generated document that is principally text-based and submitted via VeriGuide, the statement, in the form of a receipt, will be issued by the system upon students' uploading of the soft copy of the assignment. Assignments without the properly signed declaration will not be graded by teachers. Only the final version of the assignment should be submitted via VeriGuide.

The submission of a piece of work, or a part of a piece of work, for more than one purpose (e.g. to satisfy the requirements in two different courses) without declaration to this effect shall be regarded as having committed undeclared multiple submission. It is common and acceptable to reuse a turn of phrase or a sentence or two from one's own work; but wholesale reuse is problematic. In any case, agreement from the course teacher(s) concerned should be obtained prior to the submission of the piece of work.
